This is a true LIST compared by Me ROD. MACKENZIE Scry. to the ſaid Company.

NO doubt, every one will juſtly Regret the loſs of his own neareſt Freind, but it's a great and General Mercy that, of ſo many as went Crowded in Five Ships, upon ſo long and tedious a Voyage as they had, ſo few are dead; Eſpecially conſidering, that on their way they had the miſfortune of taking in bad Water, upon an Uninhabited Iſland, in the beginning of the Rainy Seaſon, which occaſioned general Sickneſs among them; tho' ſoon after their Landing in Caledonia (thanks be to GOD) they Recovered their Health ſo much (even beyond Expectation), that, when the Expreſs came away, there were but Five of all our Men who were not at Work in Building of Forts and Houſes. And as even a greater Number of ſo many as went, might have died by this time, had they all remain'd at Home; ſo it may be ſome Satisfaction to the neareſt Friends of the deceaſed that their Names ſhall ſtand upon Record as being amongſt the firſt Brave Adventurers that went upon the moſt Noble, moſt Honourable, and moſt Promiſing Undertaking that Scotland ever took in Hand.
